Hongkong, March 27th, 1875.

THE Chinese in America are being legislated for and against with great activity. They have drawn an amount of Senatorial attention-upon-themselves that they doubtless in no way desired; they have attained a no toriety and prominence they were probably far from seeking. But whether they wished it or not they have been made the subject of here only reaches about half that in Hongkong several bills in Congress, bills which have for their chief object the discouragement of Chinese emigration into the United States. We have always admitted the propriety and usefulness of the bill against the importation of Chinese or other Oriental women for immoral purposes, and are glad to learn that the Home Committee on Foreign Affairs at Washington have agreed to report the bill, any violation of which will be visited by severe penalties. But while admitting the necessity of this bill, most dispassionate outsiders will, we imagine, regret to hear that the revised statutes to prevent Chinese naturalisation have passed the American Senate and only await the President's signature. There is little doubt about that being given, and so the matter may now be considered as In passing such an illiberal measure the Congress of the United States illustrates in a most striking manner how essentially conservative the most radical become when their interests or pockets are in any degree affected or threatened. Consistency is thrown to the winds in such a case, the cry of "craft in danger" is immediately raised, and speedily has a talismanic effect. The British Trade Unionist is the most contradictory being imaginable. In one breath he clamours for equality and the overthrow of privilege; in the next he is frantically defending his own peculiar and cherished monopoly of labour. Much the same may be said of the lower class citizen of the Great Republic. Proud of the supposed equality prevailing, he yet would willingly deny it to the negro and the Chinaman, and regards them as of an inferior guilty, but will fall heavily upon laboring men. race. river at Chester, Pennsylvania, by John Roach & Son, of the best material in conformity to the rules of the Bureau Veritus and under the observation of an officer of the P.M.S.S. Company. She is built of iron, is 423 feet long. 45 feet beam, 30 feet deep, and registers 5,079 62:100 tons. She has four masts, square-rigged on three; she has five water-tight bulkheads; she is abundantly furnished with pumping power for bilge and fire purposes, with boats, rafts, life preservers in fact, with everything that may be necessary for her safety or that of ber people under any and all circumstances. There are no less than thirty-two engines, great and small, aboard of her. Amongst them are three sets for rapidly hauling coals and cargo, a pair for steering, a pair for working the and porjury in the Tichborne case in a speech windless, one for ventilation, etc. She has by Mr. Ashley in the Isle of Wight. excellent accommodation for 129 first-class and 1,500 steerage passengers. Her diningroom, cabine and social hall are elegantly furnished in five varieties of hard wood, barmoniously arranged as to resulting offect. She is heated by steam pasting through long brass pipes reaching from and to end of her. The tables in the dining-room are made to accommodate ten persons each; instead of benches Court is looking ill, dated as above, was received viz Margeilles, on chairs. The painting overhead is well and work, and some very fine carving is seen about a large mirror. Her propelling power consists of two compound 'engines, two high-pressure cylinders, each 51 inches in diameter, and two lowpressure engines, each 88 inches in diameterall of 54 inch stroke, applied with steam at 60 pounds presente by ten cylindrical return tubular boilers, each one 10.5 feet long, and 13 feet in diameter; thickness of cheil, 13-16 inch; tensile strength, 50,000; 3 fornaces in condensing surface, and independent circulaing pumps. Propeller, Hirech patent; 20 min. 3 seo. diameter. 30 min. pitch; area of arius, 144 near feet; propeller shaft, 181 sea.; two donkey engines, for port use, in working winches, windlass, fire-pumps, or beating apparatus; a fresh-water condenser, capable of turnishing 8,000 gallons of clear, pulatable water, at a temperature of 50 deg. F." Among the many improvements introduced on this mammoth vessel is an attachment to the condensing apparatus, invented by Mr. Lighthall of New York, by which the condensed water is reduced through the production of a vacuum to a degree of temperature twenty or thirty degrees below that of the sea, making it palatable to the most exacting taste. A better den of the immensity of the ship is given by the statement that twenty-cight engines, large and small; are ascommodated and required for its perfect working. Another improvement worthy of note is the introduction on the berthdeck of a contrivance through which, in bad weather when the ports are closed, the foul air is speked up and carried off by the smakestack. while fresh air is admitted by four ventilators from the apar or upper deck. The City of Peking left San Francisco on the 20th altimo. Before leaving that port, she was courteously thrown open to public inspection, and thousands visited her. When seventeen days out from San Francisco, it was discovered that an arm had dropped from her screw. Up to this time she had made a very good run, the average distance per day (using 7 boilers, 48 tons of coals, and the engines making 44 revolutions per minute) being 300 miles. She reached Yokohama on the 13th March, making the voyage in 19 days, 19 hours and 35 minutes. She was detained at Yokohama nearly a week for the purpose of having her screw repaired Sha left that port on the 19th inst., and arrived in Hongkong, as already stated, on Thursday morning. She now lies off the Pacific Mail Company's Wharf, and from the shore presents an imposing appearance. Some idea may be formed of her immensity when we state that her crew numbers no less than 180. Her first officer is Mr. W. G. Pitts; her chief engineer. Mr. F. H. Barrett; her purser, Mr. J. W. Meyers; and her surgeon, Mr. F. D. Starges.

L'OR comprehensiveness and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are bere given in extenso. Each and every word i fully illustrated and explained; forming exercises for students of a most instructive nature. Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given, the accents being carefully marked on the best principle hitherto attained. The typo- curate length at graphy displays the success of an attempt to being required. economy of space, achieving a clearness not previously attained, and dispensing with those vast margins and vacant spaces which have Billiard Tuble beretofore obaracterized Chinese publications. To illustrate the vast scope of the work, the Co.'s peculiar principle, thereby naking an old following facts are submitted for consideration. Chalmers' Vocabularly contains about 16,000 Chinese characters, and Medhurst's English and Chinese Dictionary about 100,000, whilet this work contains more than 50,000 English sine, the latter with burners on the dupler words, and upwards of 600,000 Chinese characters. Again, despite all the grammars and student of this difficult language absolutely recations and equivalents of different words which have one general meaning. Of these examples this work contains more than five times as

For practical purposes the arrangement of the work is so complete, that a reference to its pages enables a person who understands English to communicate effectively with natives who understand nothing but Chinese. In this respect the work will be found Price Lists, Catalogues, and all information China, and to the natives themselves it exdeed of them are perfectly acquainted. To parties resident in England and interested in China it cannot but be invaluable occasionally. It comprises upwards of two thousand large quarto pages.
